

Soul Love Trio, Happy Together After Year, Hope for Quadrangle

Dr. Chase, His Wife and Her
Soulmate Have Lived as
One Family on Isolated
Farm—He Calls Golden
Rule Triangle a Success.

East Abstead, N. H., Jan. 31.—The Golden Rule Triangle is pronounced a success by its founder. Here in the land of winter-long snow, the country of saw-mills and ox teams and maple groves and of New England rigidity, spiritual love has been proved a viable reality, according to those who have tried it.

The natives have learned to call the place Mount Plato. Fifteen miles from Bellows Falls, Vt., the nearest railroad station, with only miles and miles of silent forest-covered hills and valleys and singing Cold River for company, the daring social experiment has been worked out.

Dr. H. Lincoln Chase today assured a reporter that peace and harmony and happiness have come to dwell upon the mountain top with the little group of actors in this strange comedy drama in which the conventions have been defied and outraged to a degree that would fill the soul of George Bernard Shaw with glee and draw forth a whole volume of inverted essays from Gilbert K. Chesterton.

Cast of characters.
The roles are: Husband, Wife, Soulmate, Shadow.
The Wife—Mrs. Margaret Chase, about fifty. In the words of her husband, "she is a woman of the world, a woman of the world, a woman of the world." The Soulmate—Harley Bennett, Boston architect of good family. About forty. trim and athletic of figure, smooth-skinned, with a mop of curly, chestnut hair standing out from his ears that would draw attention to him in any company. Bennett has bright blue eyes that really become dramatic and the face of a student and an artist.

The Husband—Dr. H. Lincoln Chase, fifty-five, physician, tall, slim with a sloping forehead and a fringe of brown whiskers that convert his face into a lengthened oval. His expression is placid, with a hint of enduring hardness. He is the father of a family of five that has not been altogether tranquil.

The Shadow (as viewed from Mount Plato): In New York, she is very much reality—Mrs. Mary Ware Bennett, who divorced the soulmate. Formerly an actress, later corresponding secretary of the National Association of Dramatic Artists and organizer of the Twilight Sleep Club.

Minor actors whose essential parts are matters of keen conjecture among those interested are the two Chase children, Herman L., aged eleven, and Mary, aged seventeen, living on the New Hampshire farm with their parents and the soulmate, and two Bennett children, Carlton, fourteen, and Devon, nine, in the custody of their mother, the "shadow," and being educated at Framingham, Mass.

Dr. Chase's announced final decision to retire altogether from the practice of medicine and to live on his East Abstead farm with his wife and the soulmate, who have already lived there together several years, led to the reporter's visit.

The Prologue.
More than a year ago Dr. Chase closed his attractive home at 22 Kennedy road, Brookline, Mass. He packed his books, his papers, his family, and, stating briefly that any one could communicate with him at East Abstead, he left his home and went to the farm.

Today, after more than a year there with little to break the unbroken round of rural monotony, after an association of nearly a year with the soulmate, Dr. Chase has decided to build him the home that is now abandoned and for sale.

Enter the Soulmate.
Accordingly, the Chase engaged Harley Bennett to be their architect. Bennett then, thirty-five at the time, a Harvard graduate, who had won him a professional commission or two from the city, was charged with designing and constructing a home for the doctor and his wife. The soulmate, who had been with the Chase family for some time, was charged with the task of making the home a success.

The Shadow's Story.
Mrs. Bennett, on the stand, showed neither sympathy nor tolerance for her husband's broad ideals. She was the outraged wife, bitter at the interference with her domestic affairs and making no effort to conceal the fact. "Our home was happy until this old woman came into my husband's life," she told the jury. "I can tell you that I love my wife more than I love my husband. My husband tries to tell me when I hide him for his infidelity that he can love another woman as much as he loves me, and I am not to mind. My husband, to love all women, though married, to love all women, I refused to say any more than that we each take one of the children and go our separate ways, still loving each other."

Three years later the world learned that on the isolated New Hampshire farm Bennett and Mrs. Chase, and the latter's two children, had been dwelling together and that Dr. Chase

Here Is the Philosophy of Two Members of the Golden Rule Triangle

Life and social relations as seen by Mrs. Margaret Chase and her husband, Dr. D. Lincoln Chase, who approves of Mrs. Chase's soulmate love with Harley Bennett, Boston architect.

Mrs. Chase:
Life is not what people think, but what they do. Be square with yourself; be true to that divine idea which God meant you should exemplify.

The soul of man is all; will power is supreme. Nothing much matters except conscience as a guide to conduct. True love goes out like light in every direction.

Do not allow what a husband or wife thinks to interfere with your living your own life. If married people truly love each other they will not try to control one another's actions.

Marriage as a fixed and characteristic institution does not exist today.

Dr. H. Lincoln Chase:
Love of the deepest sort may flourish endlessly without the faintest hint of the physical.

I believe that no person can monopolize the love of another if that other has a big heart and a big soul.

Mrs. Bennett cast her husband off because they had contention on a spiritual plane. We always hope to welcome her back to make a fourth in our happiness.

We are living our lives according to the Golden Rule. Jesus taught us love and tolerance; Emerson taught us to have a community life of ideas; Tolstoy taught us deep abiding peace.

Still Love Each Other.
"If it could only be understood that my wife and I still love each other very dearly and that we are still man and wife in the full sense of the phrase, the holy thing we have worked out on our mountain might be better grasped."

"I believe as Dr. Chase and my wife do," Dr. Chase went on, "that no person can monopolize the love of another, if that other has a big heart and a big soul. Mr. Bennett couldn't grasp his being into his love for one human. He and my wife are thoroughly compatible, and they learned to care for each other. They have a big heart and a big soul."

"But Bennett didn't cast off his wife on that account. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett had contention on a spiritual plane. That contention led Mrs. Bennett to leave him. The divorce thrust Mr. Bennett out of his home. That should be clear. Bennett did not dispute with his wife; she dispensed with him."

"This I want to emphasize: Our home is just as open to Mrs. Bennett as it is to Harley Bennett. We are a happy trio and the three of us would welcome Mrs. Bennett back at any time. There is no real reason why she should not dwell in harmony with us."
